What about other messaging/iMessage effects and tricks? There is a long list of tips and tricks to help you learn more about messaging and emailing on your iPhone and iPad. Check out all our message and email tips and FAQs. Secret messages on iMessage have returned in a big way. Do you remember the first time you gave a message of congratulations and your screen exploded in County? That still works - and more has been added to the composition of texts that produce some exciting visual effects on iMessage. Pew Pew even sends its friends a laser effect, which has a lot of love for spam in your iMessage contacts. Just remember that you only send effects over iMessage, which means that Android users are out of luck. But if you're using an iPhone, iPad or Mac PC, you can send these fun messages to anyone in Apple's ecosystem and your receiver will see its effects. Just remember to send the exact term and nothing else: the effect will not be turned off if there is more to the message. They are free, fun, and very situational – but each can use a little text message showing laser light in your life right now. Congratulations:iMessage is the classic main secret. Text 'Congratulations' and receiver effects that will get confetti showers from above. It's a lovely effect for advertising, graduation, or sarcastic responses. Happy birthday: You want to wish a friend a happy birthday? Just put this phrase on iMessage to them and their screens will be covered Balloon for a few short seconds. Unfortunately, no one's involved in this party. Happy New Year: You may have stumbled on this one now: wish someone a 'happy New Year' and the background will explode in a fireworks display. This exchange kicks in some haptic tremors in tune with the fireworks explosion, which is a nice touch - and the Herald of Sweet Effects to come. Happy Chinese New Year/Wishing someone's 'Happy Chinese New Year' messages up bright red and sends a glow in the background, which vibrates with some sensitivity. Lovely! Pew PewAll is due to respect other messages, but this is the new king: kind of 'pew pew' to a friend/acquaintance/frenemy and the screen will be put in its laser light, sourced from its 'Pew Pew'. The colors are random, but you will feel like you're in a nightclub when you get to receive a party in your texts. These are the best video chat apps first there are sms symbols. You know, half-cloned blinking, heart less than 3. Then there were the emojis, where you could tell a whole story in small images 📄, now you can spice up your messages with effects, and the good news is that it's not that hard to do. Message effects are available to iPhone users via iMessage, and they can really help get their message across—no matter what the message is. To access the effects, open your iMessage app and compose a message. When you're ready to send a message, hold down the Send button and you'll see the Options menu. Bubble effects only affect the actual bubble message being sent. Invisible InkThis option scrambles your message until the other person taps on it. Do you have a secret to share? Invisible ink is a good choice. Send a gentle message as it looks smaller inside the bubble. This is the perfect option to send a literal gentle reminder. Not loud, it doesn't scream the message at the recipient, but it appears in the big text. If you have a friend who's always late, send an appointment with this one. Slam sending a slam message it will literally have a slap on the message page. Lost calls, worries, excitement... Endless possibilities. Screen effects when you use a screen effect, the whole screen will... Well, I'm impressed. It is also known as the Pew Pew effect. A full-fledged laser display will take over your screen when you submit this effect. Or, just send Pew Pew and send it as well. The echo effect shows your message up several times across the screen. Yes to planning, not to plan, the effect will get its point echoes throughout. The spotlight will turn all your screens black except for the message you sent, which will be turned on. Think of it like a bold message. Balloons are regularly expensive. Display effect balloons are free. This choice is basically done for you. Here's a tip: Just send happy birthday! The effect will be enabled. Confetti - Congratulations jump out of the real pastry mess and send it The pastry effect will be activated automatically if you send greetings! The love of this one is very self-explaining. It sends a giant heart that is connected to your message. Who doesn't want that? Fireworks this fireworks are definitely not a fire risk. Happy New Year!! And the whole screen will be lit with fireworks. Celebrate classy celebrations for each occasion. The festive effect will fill your screen with gold glitter (and it won't get stuck into your hands for a week). Message effects are a great way to add a little oomph to your conversations, and with all these options you can mix things up however you want!
